Volume 2 issue 3

Villa Living

The Empire of the Sun

By Thomas Jones

There are as many reasons to visit Bali as there are visitors to these shores. Some come for the shopping, some for the culture, many come to shmooze and booze, others come to see and be seen, while a discriminating few just come to totally relax in their own picture perfect piece of paradise. If the latter shoe fits your soul, then Majapahit Beach Villas is where you should be seen, or should I say be unseen, this summer. With Seminyak bursting at the seams and most beachfronts having to be shared with a thousand other eager faces, it is a divine pleasure to relax in the very private and personal space that is Majapahit.

televisions, high-speed Internet and a hi-fi system to bring the sounds and sights of the electronic world to your world.

On either side of the main living space are two bedrooms replete with ensuite bathrooms, while up the impressive floating staircase is the luxurious master bedroom that features a terrace across its entire width with sweeping views of the ocean, the islands and the distant horizon. Downstairs a jacuzzi extends from the open-air communal living space and flows into a seventeen metre pool that runs the length of the immaculately manicured garden. The garden is dominated by its simple yet beautiful lawn with palm trees, lotus pond and antique statues and ornaments that reflect the theme of the namesake ancient Indonesian Majapahit Empire that first inspired the villa's design. Each garden also has a large bale for relaxing in and the two beachfront villas have wooden decks perched right above the sand for dining and lounging.

Each villa comes with a 24-hour personal butler and a small army of friendly staff on call to make your stay as memorable as you want it to be. Their resident five star chef will create for you the perfect meal served right on the beachfront or in your garden while you sip cocktails and watch and listen to the waves gently lap at the sands just below your feet.

At Majapahit you are perfectly located to sample all of Bali's tourist delights. Forty minutes away from the airport and the retail delights of Kuta and Seminyak, twenty minutes from the green rice field serenity of Bali's artistic capital of Ubud, and right on the border of the mighty untapped northeast frontier, you are at the crossroads of all the diversity that Bali has to offer.

Surrounded by cornfields, tobacco fields and coconut groves, Majapahit is a quiet, luxurious and secluded haven far from the nearest neighbours. Most importantly, it is on absolute beachfront, hidden away from the busy world outside, providing one with the privacy and exclusivity one would expect from a luxury island getaway.
